

On April 30th 1999, a nail bomb exploded inside Admiral Duncan, a popular gay bar in Old Compton Street in the middle of Soho. Andrea Dykes, 27 and pregnant with her first child, Nick Moore, 31, and John Light, 32 died that day. Several dozens were wounded. I moved to London not that long after this attack. I ended up living just a few blocks away for most of the five years of my first stay in London (went back to Amsterdam for a little bit before returning).

